INTRODUCTION.

THE collection of these volumes was prompted by a sentiment of filial regard for a Church of which my parents were members, and in which my earliest religious impressions were received.

Various causes have contributed to render this collection less complete than I once hoped to make it. Books much desired are absorbed in Libraries, and rarely offered for sale. Of late years, too, more gleaners have entered this field of inquiry; and distance from its more fertile portions has proved unfavorable to success. European Catalogues are, of necessity, the chief source of supply; and frequently, before these reach us, others, favored by proximity, step in and secure coveted volumes.

The claim of the Exiles from Salzburg to a place here is doubtful. Rieger may, in his "Salzburg Gottes," have erred in attributing the protestantism of Salzburg to Bohemia; and yet the expatriation, in the winter of 1731-2, of more than twenty thousands of the inhabitants of so small a State for the sake of conscience, has special claims to notice, and does not read like so recent a chapter in the world's history.

The last section, "VARIA," contains books which have no special reference to the Brethren. Some of them, however, are curious or rare, and are therefore retained; but many others, which have no such claim, are bound up with books or pamphlets necessary to the collection.

In describing these volumes the printer's designation of the form, or size, has been usually followed; although many of the German octavos of the last century would scarcely now rank as duodecimos.

Some of the longer titles are abbreviated, but enough is still preserved to identify the book and its edition. In the paging of some books the preface and index are included, while in many others these are separately numbered; but, except in a few cases of specially described books, I have uniformly counted and given the full number of pages, including both preface and index.

In an Appendix to the Catalogue will be found a brief notice, from the "Moravian," of the career of the Hussite leader Ziska; and a sketch of the history of the Bohemian Bible, together with a discussion of its claim to European priority. This was originally a contribution to the "Transactions of the Moravian Historical Society." Further research has enabled me to extend and correct it.

To the "Universal Magazine," an English periodical of the last century, I owe a Report of the Debates in the British Parliament on the Act of 22d of George II., Anno 1749, entitled "An Act for encouraging the People known by the name of the Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren, to settle in his Majesty's Colonies in America." And to this I annex a copy of the Act.

An abstract of the Magazine's Report appeared in the "Messenger," London, 1865, and supplies the names of several of the speakers; the others are unknown, every name in the Report being fictitious or disguised.

In these palmy days of the all but ubiquitous Reporter, it seems scarcely credible that under the second George the right to report proceedings of the Legislature was still unconceded to him, and that fine or imprisonment for breach of the privileges of Parliament was only evaded by crediting (as the celebrated Dr. Johnson did) the proceedings to the Senate of Lilliput, and assigning fictitious names to the speakers! But such was the fact.

Our frontispiece is a reduced copy of a fine engraving by Wolff from the picture of Holbein. It also exhibits a fac-simile of the handwriting of John Huss from an official entry made by him, as Dean of the Faculty of Philosophy, in the Records of the University of Prague, in the year 1401. For this I am indebted to F. M. Pelzel, who discovered and published it in his Biography of King Wenceslaus, A. D. 1790.

ZISKA.

BRIEF NOTICES OF THE CAREER OF THIS GREAT CAPTAIN OF THE HUSSITES.

LITTLE is positively known of Ziska until, as from behind a cloud, he stepped into the arena to which Bohemia felt herself challenged by the Council of Constance, and at once took a leader's place in the conflict. He is believed, however, to have attained high military rank in the service of the King of Poland; and is said to have especially distinguished himself in a great battle gained over the German Knights in Lithuania, in the year 1410.

The date of his birth is not ascertained. The most exact of his historians can only say that he was probably born in the third quarter of the fourteenth century. Even his name is a subject of controversy. Before he became prominent in Bohemia he had lost an eye; how and when, is unknown. The fact only is mentioned without comment, by Æneas Sylvius, a contemporary; and after him by Hagek, Cochläus, and Boregk. Dubravius, writing more than a century after Ziska's death, 1552, first says that the name signifies one eyed, "Zisco quod monoculos sonat." Theobald, also, in "Wars of the Hussites," 1609, says that the name was given to Ziska because of his loss of an eye. Nearly all subsequent writers have copied from these, adding the assertion that Ziska is a Bohemian word meaning one eyed. In flat contradiction, however, to all these authorities, the author of the life of Ziska, in a series of "Memoirs of renowned Bohemians," published at Prague in 1784, says expressly that neither in Bohemian, nor any other Slavonic language, does Ziska signify one eyed. His exact words are these, "Ziska heist weder in der Böhmischen noch in einer andern Slavischen Sprache einaugigt."

However acquired, this name was early adopted by Ziska. His marriage contract, dated in 1384, was signed "Johann, genannt Zischka von Trocznow." Afterwards, as in a letter dated in 1418, and until his death, he styled himself "Johann Zischka von Kelch" (of the cup).

All authors agree that Ziska was born in the Hamlet of Trocznow, now included in Forbes, near Schweinitz, and about ten English miles southeast of Budweis. His parents were noble but not wealthy. His mother, probably a widow, had been in the harvest field overlooking her reapers, and had barely gained the shelter of an adjacent grove, when in the shade of a spreading oak, her distinguished son was born. This tree, venerated in after years as Ziska's oak, survived almost to our times. Its old weather-beaten stem was cut down in the year 1784, and divided among the people of the neighborhood, "every smith hoping to deal heavier blows with a hammer handle from the oak of Ziska."

It is as a warrior contending for the religious and political freedom of his country, and especially as the avenger of its martyrs, that the bold form of this remarkable man looms out from the mist of centuries. Ziska was endowed with a robust and powerful frame which seemed almost insensible to fatigue; a firmness of soul unmoved by the greatest danger; a cool self-possession which enabled him to take instant advantage of the errors of an enemy; a wonderful fertility of expedient, by which he extricated his troops from positions of imminent danger, or rallied them to renewed conflict from fields of confusion and apparent rout.

To the enemies of his country and faith Ziska was fierce, stern, and implacable; moving upon them like Talus, Spenser's iron representation of Justice, and striking down without mercy or pity all who contested his path. Rigorous also in repressing insubordination in his own ranks, this impassive, inexorable man was yet beloved by the soldiers, whose fare he partook, whose privations he shared, and upon whom (reserving nothing for himself) he freely bestowed all the spoils of the enemy.

At the siege of Raby in 1422, Ziska lost his remaining eye and was thenceforth totally blind; but even before he recovered from the wound, his soldiers surrounded the house in which he was lying, and refused to return to camp without him. Blind as he was, they had implicit confidence in his guidance and counsel. He might no longer lead the attack, but in the day of battle, as at Deutschbrod and at Malleslow, or of threatened mutiny, as under the walls of Prague, Ziska, mounted upon a wagon and standing under the folds of his battle flag "of the cup," with a few simple but glowing words could bend his followers to his will, inspire them with his own indomitable energy, and send them as an avalanche upon the foe.

The public career of Ziska was short; but six years were given him to engrave his name on the history of Bohemia, and he did it indelibly. His death was fatal to the liberties of his country. No other leader could fill his place, or inspire the army with the confidence it had reposed in Ziska. In consequence of his death the army, which united might have secured Bohemian independence, became divided and disorganized,

Ziska's remains were first interred at Koeniggratz, but were soon afterwards, at the instance of the people of Czaszlow, removed to that city and deposited, with all honor, in their principal church. The monument erected there to his memory was seen by Theobald in 1605 or '6, and described by him in a work published in 1609. This tomb, undisturbed for nearly two centuries, was barbarously demolished after the battle of the White Mountain, by order of the Emperor, Ferdinand the II. Every vestige of the tomb was destroyed, but it was impossible to erase the memory of Ziska from the Bohemian heart. His countrymen have ever regarded him as a representative man. He was a strong, perchance a rough, embodiment of the national character in his era. He is still the popular hero whose name and deeds are as household words to every true child of Bohemia. So deep and enduring has been the national regard that a writer, towards the close of the last century, could say, "The spot upon which stood the tent of the dying Ziska is sacred to this day, and, although in the midst of cultivated fields, it yet remains untouched by the plough!" He died in the year 1424. W. G. M.

THE BOHEMIAN BIBLE.

HISTORY OF THE BOHEMIAN BIBLE, WITH AN EXAMINATION OF ITS CLAIM TO EUROPEAN PRIORITY.

A Bohemian version of the Scriptures had a very early date. The Emperor Charles IV. as King of Bohemia, in a charter granted in 1347, ascribes this version to St. Jerome.

The Jesuit Balbinus,* who had devoted much time and patient labor to the annals of Bohemia; and Comenius, the last Bishop of the Bohemian Brethren, alike agreed in accepting this as the true origin of the Bohemian version.

On the contrary, Joseph Dobrowsky, a distinguished Bohemian scholar, who had met with no very ancient MSS. of the Bohemian Bible, disbelieved their existence, and thought it probable that the first translation was made at the instance of the pious King Wenzel II., who ascended the throne in 1283 and died in 1305.†

with Slavonic languages and their dialects, entitle his opinion upon any question of Slavic literature to great respect; and yet we think it very improbable that the illustrious founder of the University of Prague could have applied the language we quote,* to a translation made within the memory of many men then living.

The learned P. Gelasius Dobner, after a careful examination of authorities and evidence, arrives at the conclusion that the version attributed to St. Jerome was actually the work of Cyril and Methodius, Greek missionaries, who first proclaimed the Gospel to the Slavonians about the year 860; but that their translation having become archaic, after several centuries had materially modified the language of the Bohemians, was revised, modernized, and assimilated to the Latin Vulgate, and was afterwards generally attributed to St. Jerome; the more readily as he was claimed to be a fellow countryman by Slavonic writers.†

That the Bohemian preceded the English version is evident from the testimony of the venerable Wycliffe, who, in his book "Triplicis vincula amoris," while contending for the right of Englishmen to have a translation of the Bible, says "It is possible that the noble Queen of England, the sister of Cæsar, may have the Gospel written in three languages, Bohemian, German, and Latin; but to hereticate her on this account would be Luciferian folly."‡ This Queen was Anne of Bohemia, daughter of the Emperor Charles IV., and sister to Wenceslaus his successor. She was married to Richard II. of England A. D. 1382, and it was about this time that the first English translation by Wycliffe was completed. The author of the General Prologue to the revised version of this work, John Purvey (writing circa 1388), also says "Frenshe men and Beemers han the bible translated in here modir langage," and pertinently asks "Whi shulden not English men have the same in here modir langage."§

It is therefore evident that Rieger|| and others who have attributed the Bohemian version to John Huss were mistaken, as it existed long before his day. It is, however, certain that by Huss, or under his supervision, it was revised, transcribed, and circulated. We know that copies were numerous in after years among his followers; and that, in spite of the destruction caused by desolating wars and relentless persecution, some of them still exist. Le Long mentions especially a Bible in the Vatican, and a Testament in the Bodleian Library;* but Dobrowsky enumerates no less than 33 manuscripts of the whole Bible and 22 of the New Testament, the most of them written in the 15th Century.† Among those preserved in the Library of the University of Prague, is one in two volumes 8vo., beautifully written and charmingly illustrated in colors, by a Taborite, the wife of a miller in the Béchiner Circle, about the year 1450.‡ A fact strongly confirmative of what Æneas Sylvius says of the culture of the Taborite women and their intimate acquaintance with the Scriptures.§ While of the vindications of the doctrines of Huss, which appeared in Bohemia after his martyrdom, the most noteworthy was written by a woman.||

According to Dobrowsky, ¶ a new Testament (Pilsen?), 1475, was the first book printed in Bohemia. Hanslik says the first with an untested date. Of this edition only two copies are known to exist; one in the Imperial Library at Vienna, and the other in that of the University of Prague. The antiquity of this Testament was unknown and unsuspected until discovered by the librarian Ungar, towards the close of the last century. It is a folio printed on 209 leaves of strong white paper, with no name of printer or place of publication, without signatures, catchwords, or paging. At the end is a wood-cut representing two shields inverted and suspended upon a short branch; on one of these shields appears the Roman numeral M, upon the other the old Arabic figures ^ 7 (7 and 5), and in the middle space between the upper parts of the shields a 9 (4).**

This enigmatic, or at least obscure disposition of the date had prevented its earlier recognition.

Fragments of another edition of the Testament, supposed to have been printed about 1485, are extant; but nothing positive in regard to it has been ascertained.

The historian of the Brethren, Gindely, informs us that the first Bohe-mian press was established in the interest of the Roman Catholics, at Pilsen, in 1468.* As, however, this date rests upon a doubtful basis, the supposed publication there at that time of a Trojan history, which Dobrowsky† contended, with apparent reason, could not have been printed before 1476, and probably not until some years later, it is not improbable that Gindley's date is erroneous.

Conceding, however, the early existence of this Roman Catholic press, it is still very unlikely that one of its first issues should have been a New Testament in the vernacular. And in fact, after a careful examination of authorities we find no sufficient evidence, certainly no proof, that either the Testament of 1475, or the Trojan history, was really printed at Pilsen, or indeed in Bohemia; but think it much more probable that they issued from Nuremberg or elsewhere in Germany.

The exact time at which a press was established in Prague is doubtful. It is claimed that the proceedings of a meeting of the Utraquist Nobles was printed there in 1483; but the first book known to have been printed in Prague was a Psalter in 1487. In the following year the first Bohemian Bible issued from the same press. Its typography is rude, the character is Gothic, initial letters all supplied by the pen. It has no division into verses, has neither page nor folio numbered, nor are there any catchwords. It is comprised in 610 folios, with two columns upon the page.‡ Like most early printed books it is without a title; but its Colophon, as translated by Kleich§ and quoted by Elsner, is to this effect, viz. :—

“The conclusion of this work, comprising all the books of the Divine law, is now happily attained in the renowned old city of Prague; and to this end both labor and money have been freely contributed by those eminent men and citizens Mr. John Pytlik and Mr. Severin, mercht., Magistrates of this year: and also by Mr. John, of the Stork, and Mr. Matthias of the White Lion (probably noted inns of Prague). In doing which they have principally desired to honor God and promote the best interest of the Kingdom of Bohemia, the growth in virtue of the Bohemian and Moravian people.” “The editors have also availed themselves of the assistance of the Professors (magister) of Prague and other skilled interpreters of the laws of the Lord in this work now brought to a close in the month of August 1488.”||

A Bible thus published in the stronghold of the Calixtines, under the auspices of the authorities of the city and partly at their expense, can only be regarded as the praiseworthy work of the Utraquists of Prague.

Very few copies of this Bible now exist. There is one in the library of the University of Prague,* and another in the National? library at Paris.† An imperfect copy was in the collection of the late Duke of Sussex, and two others have recently been offered by German booksellers; but perfect copies are extremely rare.

The still unsatisfied demand for the Scriptures was sufficient to justify the issue of another edition in the following year, 1489. This was printed at Kuttenberg, a town about 40 miles to the eastward of Prague, by Martin von Tishniowa, a man of learning who afterwards removed to Prague and held honorable positions in its University.‡ This edition differs in no material respect from that of Prague except in its illustration by wood-cuts. Both editions follow closely the Latin Vulgate and have the prefixes of St Jerome. In both of them, as also in the English of Wycliffe, the Acts of the Apostles are placed after the Epistle to the Hebrews. The Bible of Kuttenberg is even more rarely met with than that of Prague; the copy in the Library of the University of Prague being the only perfect one known to exist.

The third Bohemian Bible was printed at Venice in 1506.§ Why so distant a place was selected for the purpose is now unknown. It is true that Venice had established a reputation for superior typography, but by this time printing was well established in Bohemia, and even the Brethren had a press in Jungbuntzlau as early as the year 1500. Possibly the enemies of the truth who about that time instigated a bitter persecution of the Brethren, may have induced the authorities of the day to prohibit the printing of Bibles in Bohemia. Be that as it may, this edition also appears to have had a Calixtine origin, and was printed at the expense of citizens of Prague. Brunet, the great French bibliographer, says of it,—“Version faite à l'usage des Hussites par Benatska,”

Prag, wobey viele mühe und Unkosten gehabt haben die berühmten Männer und Bürger Herr Johann Pytilik und Herr Severin, ein Kramer, Schöpffen dieses Jahrs; wie auch Herr Johann aus den Störchen, und Herr Matthias aus dem Weissen Löwen, [so vermüthlich in Prag berühmte Gästhöfe gewesen sind] indem sie zuvörderst Ihr Absehen auf Gottes Ehre und den auch auf das wahre Beste des Königreichs Böhmen und den Anwachs im Guten der Böhmen und Mähren gehabt haben. Sie haben sich dabey der Hülfe der prägerischen Magister und anderer im Gesetze des Herrn erfahrenen Männer bedienet, bis sie diese arbeit zu Ende gebracht haben und zwar im Jahr 1488, in Monat August.”

—an assertion which gave the writer much trouble, until after consulting many biographers and bibliographers in search for Benatska, he discovered that the word is the Bohemian name of Venice! and that Brunet, or his amanensis, had mistaken it for the name of a printer. The real printer was Peter Lichtenstein, a native of Cologne.

This Venetian edition has frequently been described as the first Bohemian Bible, and especially by Theobald the historian of the wars of the Hussites,* and Samuel A. Weleslawina,† the publisher of a Bohemian Bible at Prague in 1613; and after them by Comenius who probably accepted the statement of these writers without sufficient examination. Indeed it is improbable that Comenius ever saw a copy of this edition, which had not only become rare, but was superseded before his birth by the very superior translation of the Brethren from the original Greek and Hebrew. Theobald, by his own confession imperfectly acquainted with the Bohemian language, failed to notice a passage in the preface to the Bible in question which distinctly refers to previous editions, of which it only professes this to be a revision and improvement. This is a statement which such a scholar as Comenius would scarcely have overlooked. The passage as translated by Elsner reads thus:—

“This work was undertaken by those judicious men John Hlawsa, Wenzel Sowa, and Burian Lasar, citizens of Old Prague, who have spared no expense necessary to its completion,” etc.‡ “And although the Bible has already been printed in the language of Bohemia it was with many imperfections which are here corrected.”§ And again in the preface or introduction to the 4th book of Ezra, the Editors say: “Notwithstanding the Bohemian Bible has been heretofore twice printed, neither of those editions contained this 4th book of Ezra.”|| The editions of Prague and Kuttenberg both omit this book, and are unquestionably the two referred to.

Theobald, travelling in Bohemia about a century after the publication of the Venetian imprint,¶ met with a copy in the hands of a miller, whose hospitality he enjoyed at Tausz, and unhesitatingly accepted it as the earliest Bohemian Bible. Writing afterwards of the Taborites he commends the untiring industry with which their Pastors transcribed the Scriptures for the laity "to be read in their houses," and proceeds to say, "Finally, ten years before Luther's dispute with Tetzelius, they caused an edition to be printed in Venice, as testified by the final clause copied from the exemplar met with at Tausz," viz: "Perfectum est illud opus Biblicum Venetiis in Italia, Anno Domini 1506," etc.* There is no evidence, nor any reason for supposing, that any other Bohemian Bible was ever printed in Venice; but in attributing the printing of this to the Taborites, Theobald is manifestly wrong. That warlike sect no longer existed; and with no propriety could the name be applied to their eminently peaceful successors, the Brethren.

The three editions we have been considering were followed by others printed at Prague in the years 1529, '37, '49, '56, '70, '77, and by one at Nuremberg in 1540. All of which were translations from the Latin of Jerome.†

Seventeen editions of the New Testament only, all likewise from the Vulgate, were published in various years from 1513 to 1597. Of these, 3 were printed in Nuremberg, 1 in Olmutz, 9 at Prague, 2 at Jung-Bunzlau, 1 at Pilsen, and 1 at Prestiejowa.‡

The Bible, and at least one of the Testaments printed at Nuremberg, together with both the Testaments of Jung-Bunzlau, and probably some of those published in Prague, were printed by or for the Brethren.§ They, however, were far from satisfied with this translation of a translation, and earnestly desired to ascend as nearly as possible to the original sources of the waters of life. The way was opened to them by Bishop Blahoslaw, a man of spotless purity and great learning, who in 1564 published a New Testament translated from the original Greek, which had the rare merit of being a faithful exhibit of the sense of the original in the purest idiomatic Bohemian.|| This Testament was reprinted in 1568; and in 1593, revised and annotated by Bishop Niemczanius, formed the sixth volume of the great Bible of the Brethren.

In order to prepare the way for this translation, which they had long desired, the Brethren sent some of their most gifted youth to German and Swiss Universities where only they could then attain a thorough knowledge of the original tongues. From the young men thus educated eight scholars were selected as translators. Their moral fitness for the task may be inferred from the fact that four of them afterwards became

Bishops of the Unity.* Their literary ability has not been questioned by the bitterest enemies of their work—a work which forms the proud-est monument of the ancient church of the Brethren. It is a faithful translation rendered in choice language. A selection of passages from this Bible, for the use of schools, was published at Prague by the Jesuits in the year 1668. And in the preface to this book its Editor says that while the Bible, as a whole, cannot be recommended to Catholics, and indeed ought not, on account of its heretical errors (ketzerische Irrthümer) to be in their possession, yet its style is idiomatic, beautiful and pure beyond that of any other Bohemian book; and he wishes his selection placed in the hands of every schoolmaster in the land to be industriously read and copied by his scholars as a model of style.† Modern Bohemians also admit that the style of this version remains unsurpassed by any writer of their language; and one of them thus concludes his eulogy: “This noble work can never cease to be honored while the Bohemian language continues to be spoken.”

The first edition of this Bible was printed at Kralitz in Moravia, in the Castle and at the expense of the Baron John von Zerotin, a distinguished Nobleman who adhered to the Brethren. It was published in six quarto volumes which appeared as follows, viz.:—

The 1st. containing the Pentateuch, in	1579
“ 2d. Joshua to Esther inclusive,	1580
“ 3d. Job, Psalms and the writings of Solomon,	1582
“ 4th. The Prophetical Books,	1587
“ 5th. The Apocrypha,	1588
“ 6th. The New Testament,	1593‡

The whole enlarged and enriched by a copious and judicious commentary.§ Succeeding editions were printed in a more compact form, in one volume and without commentary. This was the first Bohemian Bible in which the chapters were divided into verses.

The Testament alone was republished in a duodecimo volume in 1596; and again, revised by Bishop Ariston, in quarto in 1601.||

A second edition of the whole Bible was printed in the year 1596. A copy of this is in the hands of the writer. It is an octavo volume of 1140 pages of text, and 34 pages of index, tables of lessons, etc. The page is arranged in double columns, the numbers of the verses occupying a space between them, and marginal notes their exterior border. The chapters are simply numbered, and are without summary. The type is small but clear. The original division into six parts is retained, and each is furnished with an engraved title enclosed in an arabesque border, and with floriated ornamental initial letters; the initials of the books and chapters are similar but smaller. Over the title of the first division is seen a lamb bearing a banner, the device on the seal of the Unity. The general title of the volume is surmounted by the Sacred name in Hebrew characters, under which on one side of an oval containing the title is a representation of Moses with the tables of the Law; and on the other side a figure bearing a cross with a banner, and representing the Gospel. Under these figures and the title, appears a triumphal procession with the Lord of Glory in a chariot drawn by lambs, and behind which Death and Hell are dragged as captives.

The third and last edition of the Bible published by the Brethren before their pitiless persecution and exile by the Emperor Ferdinand the Second, was a revision printed in 1613, in a folio volume of 1178, or including prefatory matter and indices, 1208 pages. Of this also our collection contains a copy. The type is larger and coarser than that of the 8vo. edition, and there is less finish in the initial letters and the engraved titles of the six parts, into which this also is divided. The page has two columns of 48 lines each, but the space between them is small and the numbers of the verses which in the octavo edition occupy this place are here interspersed in the text, but without interruption to its continuity, which is only broken into paragraphs. The exterior margin of each column contains some references, but a much greater number of notes of the contents of the text, supplementary to the summaries at the heads of the chapters which are brief. In neither of these editions is the place of publication indicated, but both are attributed to Kralitz.

The revered Comenius, to supply in some measure the need of his fellow exiles who were destitute of Bibles, prepared and printed at Amsterdam in 1658, only two years after the destruction of his own library in the conflagration of Lissa, a summary or abridgment of the Scriptures in the Bohemian language, entitled "A Handbook of the Marrow of the Holy Bible; the sum of what God has revealed for man to believe; commanded him to do; and taught him to expect."

This is comprised in a small, closely printed 12mo. volume of 896 pages of text, with 24 of prefatory matter and 14 of appendix.

In the year 1722 a handsome reprint of the third edition of the Brethren's Bible was published at Halle in Saxony for the descendants of exiled Bohemians, and an edition of many thousand copies soon disposed of. Encouraged by this success a bookseller of Brieg in Silesia republished it in 1745; but his work was so inferior that none but the poorest people would purchase it.* The Bohemians were noted for their love of well printed and handsomely bound books.

The New Testament was reprinted at Halle in 1709, 1722, 1752, and 1764; at Zittau in 1720; Labau 1730; Brieg 1744; and Berlin in 1752. But from 1613 to 1873 (two hundred and sixty years) the volume was never reprinted in Bohemia. In 1873 the first part of a new edition, in 4to., of the Testament with the original commentary, was published by the Comenius Society of Prague† (Spolkem Komenskeho v. Praze). It is now completed, and forms a handsome volume of 892 pages.

Notwithstanding a literary activity which subsequent Bohemian writers have regarded as wonderful, not only the Bibles, but all the devotional books of the Brethren, are now very scarce. This is in a great measure owing to the blind zeal of Jesuits, who ruthlessly burned or mutilated all they could lay their hands upon. Anton Koniasch alone is said by his biographer (himself a Jesuit) to have burned more than sixty thousand volumes, and, not content with this wholesale destruction, the indefatigable Koniasch corrected several thousand volumes by erasing with ink the passages which offended him.‡

The "Index Bohemicorum Librorum Prohibitorum" issued from the press of the Jesuits at Prague, but bears no date. The sanction of the Pope is dated 1766, that of the Archbishop of Prague 1767, and the Imperial confirmation 1770. One might have expected more liberality, or at least some relaxation of vigilance, at so late a day as the time of Clement XIII., but none appears. In the "Index" every edition of the Brethren's Bible, together with its reprints, and the abridgment of Comenius, is not only prohibited but expressly marked for destruction with an asterisk, which is thus explained: "notat Librum utpoti hæresi, vel aliis pravis dogmatis refertum, plene abolendum esse."

A splendid edition of the Bohemian translation from the Vulgate was published in Prague, by Samuel Adam Weleslawina in 1613. This edition had 158 historical engravings, besides numerous other illustrations. Among those calculated to shock the Protestant mind, are six representa-

‡ Occasionally the zeal of this hunter of heresy, who in his hot pursuit spared neither Peer nor Peasant, led him into serious trouble by provoking the bolder owners of confiscated volumes to use him roughly; and once he was purposely locked up for three days in a pig-stye, into which he had penetrated in search of suspected literature. *Pelzel, Bohmische, Mährische und Schlesische Gelehrte und Schriftsteller aus dem order der Jesuiten. tions of the Deity, contemplating the work of creation, in each of which the Creator appears attired in a blue coat and red mantle.*

Another edition of the Roman Catholic version, begun in 1677, was completed at Prague in 1715, in a large folio; indicating a very small demand and no intention to supply the common people.

We have now carefully reviewed the history of the Bohemian Bible, it only remains to examine its claim to European priority.

Historians of the Bohemian Brethren, Cranz, Holmes, and Bost especially, have stated that the Brethren were the first who printed the Bible in a modern European language. In making this claim for the Brethren these authors rely exclusively on the 69th paragraph of the "Historiola Ecclesiæ Bohemicæ" of Comenius, prefixed to the "Ratio Disciplinæ," Amstel. 1660, viz.:—

"Crebrescere interim cæpit inventa nuper in Germania Typographiæ ars, prodeuntibus variis (in Italia potissimum, Romæ & Venetiis) libellis & libris, sacris & profanis. Bohemi ergo tanto hoc Dei dono animarum potissimum salutem utendum rati, Bibliorum vernaculo Idiomate circa hoc tempus editionem (primi Europæorum iterum) procuraverunt, Venetiis: brevique post, distractis exemplaribus, Noribergæ, semel & iterum: demum domi erectis officinis (Pragæ, Boleslaviæ, Kralicii in Moravia) sæpius."†

The historians above named appear to have erred in supposing that when Comenius said "Bohemi," he ment the Brethren. In other respects they have fairly followed him, except as regards the date of this Venetian Bible. Comenius we see assigns no date, and Cranz simply repeats him. Holmes, however, thinking, probably, of the general spread of the art of printing referred to by Comenius, gives 1470 as the year in which this Bible was printed,‡ while Bost, glancing at the dates of events recorded in the adjoining paragraphs and finding 1486 precede, and 1511 follow the paragraph we have transcribed, as an average or compromise, fixes on the year 1490.§ We have seen that neither of these dates is correct, but that the Bible in question was really printed in 1506.

† "Meantime the art of printing, recently invented in Germany, began to spread; and various books and pamphlets, sacred and profane, made their appearance, especially in Italy at Rome and Venice. The Bohemians, believing that this great gift of God should be used especially for the good of souls, procured about this time an edition of the Bible in their own language (again the first of Europeans) at Venice: and shortly afterwards, the copies being all disposed of, twice at Nuremburg, and subsequently, having established printing presses at home (at Prague, Jungbuntzlau, and Kralitz in Moravia), frequently."

A later historian of the Brethren has, indeed, doubted that Comenius really intended to convey the meaning generally attached to his words in the paragraph we have quoted, of which the English equivalent appears to be, "again the first of Europeans," and which in the rather free German translation of Enderes (Schwabach, 1739), reads "worinnen sie unter allen Europaischen Völkern abermahls die Ersten waren."

In a foot-note to page 121 of the first part of his "Geschichte der alter Brüderkirche," Gnadau, 1865, Bishop Cröger says, "Inwiefern Comenius meinte dass die Böhmen in diesem Stück allen anderen Nationen vorgegangen sind, ist nicht klar (primi Europæorum iterum)." I confess, however, that I fail to see the force of this suggestion, especially when I read these words of Comenius in the light of a passage in the 14th paragraph of the Historiola, in which, writing of the early Slavonian translation ascribed to St. Jerome, he says, "Eoque inter Europæas gentes primi fuerunt Sclavi, quibus nativâ linguâ credita fuerunt eloquia Dei," which may be fairly rendered, "Thus the Slavonians were the first European people to whom the word of God was confided in their mother tongue," and is clearly the antecedent to which the iterum (again) has reference.

Having thus ascertained that the first Bohemian Testament was printed in 1475, and the first complete Bible in 1488, we will now inquire whether any other European Bibles had been previously printed. In doing this we shall chiefly rely on the answer afforded by the "Nachricht von der hochteutschen Bibelübersetzung" of Professor Nast, Stuttgart, 1779. Consulting also the works of Panzer,* Goeze,† and Hain.‡

According to Professor Nast, the early editions of the German Bible were printed in the following order, viz.:—

1st. The Bible printed at Mayence, by Fust and Schoiffer, in the year 1462.

2d. The Bible printed at Strasburg, by John Mentel, in 1466.

3d. A Bible, origin unknown, probably printed between the years 1466 and 1470.

4th. A Bible without date, place of publication, or printer's name; in a Swiss dialect of German, and probably printed at Zurich, 1470 to 1473.

5th. The great Bible of Augsburg, without name of printer or date, but believed to have been published between the years 1472 and 1476.

As these five editions were printed without dates, these have only been arrived at from the written memoranda made by their rubricists,* and the internal evidence afforded by the orthography, typography, etc. of the volumes themselves. Copies of all these editions are preserved in some of the great German libraries. They have been minutely examined and carefully described by the eminent bibliographers above named, who mainly agree in their conclusions, except in regard to the first edition, which Panzer thinks could scarcely have been printed in 1462, inasmuch as Fust & Schoiffer printed a folio Latin Bible in that year, and he thinks their means were probably unequal to the production of two such works in the same year. Watt, in Bibliotheca Britannica, Edinburgh, 1824, says† “it is pretty satisfactorily proved that this Bible was printed in 1467;” which is the latest date that any one has assigned to it. Its style and orthography are antiquated, and the version is thought to have been made at least as early as the year 1300.

The sixth German Bible, the first with a printed date, was published at Augsburg in 1477. Others followed at Augsburg in 1477, 1480, and 1487; at Nuremberg in 1483; and Strasburg in 1485. One was printed at Cologne, in the dialect of Lower Saxony, in 1480, and one at Delft, in the Dutch language, in 1477.

Several editions of an Italian version were printed at Venice between the years 1471 and 1477; and one in Spanish, at Valencia, in 1478.‡

It is thus evident that many European Bibles were extant before the first Bohemian one was printed. It is also certain that to Germany, the birth-place of the typographic art, belongs likewise the honor of having first printed the Scriptures in a modern language. W. G. M.

DEBATES IN THE ENGLISH PARLIAMENT on a Bill to relieve the United Brethren, or Moravians, from Military duty and taking Oaths. As reported for the Universal Magazine.

REASONS and OBJECTIONS

For and against

The PRIVILEGES granted to the Protestants, called the UNITED BRETHREN in the BRITISH Dominions.

*How reasonable and advantageous soever to our American Colonies the Petition of the People, known by the Name of Unitas Fratrum, may appear, it met with some Difficulties in both H—s; and as these have been differently reported, it may not be unacceptable to the Public to communicate, as much as we have been able to collect from the best Authorities, and from several Persons who attended on those Occasions. When the Petition of the Deputies of the said People was brought in, Feb. 9, 1748, Lieut. G— O——* spoke to the following Effect:*

Mr. President,

The petition, now presented, is from people of the first rank in Germany, Deputies for the Moravian episcopal church; a church long known to this nation by a friendly intercourse with the church of England: but, first, I beg leave to say something of their ancient history.

The Sclavonian countries, to which Moravia and Bohemia undoubtedly belong, received the christian religion from the apostles themselves. St. Paul saith, Rom. xv. 19, he had filled all places with the gospel, even from Jerusalem, round about unto Illyricum; and he informs us also, 2 Tim. iv. 10, that Titus was gone for the same purpose into Dalmatia: both which were Sclavonian provinces. In the fourth century Jerome, being born at Strido, a city of Illyricum, in order to advance the success of the faith, received in his own country, is said to have translated the bible into his mother-tongue. In the seventh century these churches increased very much; the sixth synod of Constantinople, held in 680, making remarkable mention of the Sclavonians, who would not appear at the said synod, because they abhorred image worship.

In the following age, God opened the door for the gospel in almost all the Sclavonian countries. The Emperor Michael the Third having made peace with the Bulgarians, and restoring to them the sister of their King, whom the Greeks had taken in a battle; this Lady, having embraced the Christian religion at Constantinople, prevailed with her brother to turn Christian; whose example his subjects followed, and even some of the neighbouring nations of the same language, which contributed much assistance to Cyril and Methodius, two Greek Bishops, expert in the Slavonic tongue; who entering into Moravia, in the year 861, converted unto Christ Swatapluck, King of the Moravians, and a short time after Borivogius, Duke of the Bohemians; from whence the brightness of the gospel darted into Poland, and even into Muscovy.

It also appeareth from hence, that all these countries were converted by the means of the eastern church, and were initiated in the Christian religion with the Grecian rites and forms. How the Bishops of Rome, who lay even then in wait to make a prey of all the churches in the world, inroached upon this Bohemian and Moravian church, is too long to be related here. It was in the year 940 that the Roman Emperor Otho, having subdued the Bohemians, enjoined them, by the express order of the Pope, to use the Roman liturgy, in the Latin tongue, which did greatly offend the Bohemians; and, since that time, there has always been a contest between the Bohemian and Romish churches; the one always laying on, the other always shaking off, the yoke of their superstitions.

In the next age Pope Celestinus tried to impose celibacy on the Bohemian clergy; for which Cardinal Peter, his Legate a Latere, very narrowly escaped being stoned by the clergy of Prague. After this Transubstantiation began to be obtruded: But in Bohemia it was not imposed with the retrenching of the cup of the Eucharist, till the year 1361, when Charles the Fourth, Emperor of the Romans, founding the University of Prague, invited over many German, French, and Italian Masters and Doctors; and these, being trained up in the custom of communicating in one kind, began vehemently to urge it; and the Bohemians, on the other side, set themselves stoutly against it. John Milicius, Canon of Prague, and his successor Matthias Janovius, who was at the same time Confessor to Charles the Fourth, were both very zealous to assert the Holy Communion in both kinds; and for that reason were banished out of the kingdom*.

It was about this time that the Bohemians began to oppose, with all their strength, the inroachments of the Roman See: At the end of the fourteenth century John Huss, Professor of the University of Prague,

* The last, before he died, uttered these words: 'The fury of the enemies of the truth has hitherto prevailed against us; but it shall not always be so: for there shall arise a mean people without sword or power, whom they shall not be able to deal withal.'

inveighed very daringly against the overflowing errors of the church of Rome, and that with the greatest applause of the people of Prague. It very much revived his spirit, that in the year 1400 he received from England the books* of John Wickliffè, the first of our own reformers; and he encouraged Jerome of Prague to oppose the prevailing errors with the like boldness in the schools, as he himself did in the church. Upon which the University, which was mostly filled with foreigners, passed a censure upon Wickliff's articles. But the Bohemians debated the prerogative of election with the Pope's abettors, making it good that it belonged to them as natives; and King Wenceslaus gave the sentence on the Bohemians side, and created John Huss Rector of the University in the year 1409. Two years after, Pope John having sent indulgences abroad, to be distributed to all those that would take up arms for the Romish church against the King of Naples, the Bohemians burned all the said bulls in the market-place, together with the letters of the Popish Prelates. The Pope, being enraged therewith, summoned John Huss to Rome, and by an edict prohibited the celebration of divine service and administration of the Lord's Supper at Prague: Whereupon John Huss withdrew from that city, and preached the word of God, from town to town, all over the kingdom, until such time as he was cited to Constance, where he went with the safe conduct of the Emperor Sigismund: But, notwithstanding the said letter of Sigismund, he and Jerome of Prague were treated very ignominiously, and both condemned to the flames. Huss was burnt on the 6th of July, 1415, and Jerome, the following year, on the 30th of May.

The nobility and people of Bohemia and Moravia, heinously resenting the blood and execution of their Doctors by the Pope, were exasperated in such a manner against the Popish party, that in the year 1419 the tumult was so great at Prague, that the Governor and twelve Senators were thrown out of the windows of the Council-house, and forced to fall upon the points of the soldiers spears. Not long after, Wenceslaus being dead, Sigismund, his brother, seized the kingdom; who enacted many things to the prejudice of the conscience of the Bohemians, and soon after entered Bohemia with a powerful army, and infested it with war for ten years; Zisca, the General of the Bohemians, always getting the better.

After the Council of Basil, the protesting Bohemians divided among themselves, forming two parties; the one, demanding only the use of the Cup, was called Calixtines; and the other, persevering in all parts of John Huss's doctrine, were properly called Hussites or Taborites. These opposed one another till it came to blows. This was the state of Bohemia, till the year 1450, when the quiet-minded of each party, joining together in the common tenets, which all allowed, and laying aside all party distinctions, formed a congregation, after the form of the apostolical simplicity, calling themselves the Unitas Fratrum or United Brethren; which title is given to them, by way of eminency, to this day*.

These Brethren having applied to King Podiebrad, for some place where they might live in safety, and serve God with a pure conscience; the Barony of Litits, in the mountainous places of Moravia, in the neighbourhood of Silesia, was granted to them (the name of the place was called Fulneck) whither many of the citizens of Prague, Bachelors and Masters of Arts, Commons and Nobles, learned and unlearned, withdrew themselves, from all parts of Bohemia and Moravia. Their Pastors were of the Calixtines, of which Michael Samberg, a pious and devout old man, was the chief; but being solicitous, whether that ordination would be valid enough, if a Presbyter ordained a Presbyter, without a Bishop, and how they should be able to defend such ordination, they at length agreed to chuse nine persons among themselves by vote; and, of these nine, three by lot, whom they sent to the Waldenses in Austria, whose Bishop Stephen, getting another Bishop, and some of the Ministers, to be present with him, he declared unto them what great persecutions they had undergone in Italy and France; how, through many sufferings, they had continued the succession from the Apostles times; and creating them three Bishops, by the imposition of hands, they conferred on them power to ordain Ministers, and sent them away. The same year, 1467, Bishop Stephen was apprehended by the Papists and burnt alive at Vienna; and many of the good Waldenses retired to the brethren of Fulneck, and joined with them. What great persecutions these brethren underwent is inexpressible; those of 1467 and 1468 were so severe, that, being dispersed into the mountains and woods, they dwelt in caves or dens; and, not being safe, even there, they durst not make any fires, except in the night, lest the smoke might betray them: But the history of the Bohemian persecutions, and also the history of the Sclavonian churches, both written by Bishop Amos Comenius, having been printed in English†, there is no need to enlarge thereupon.

Soon after these dawns of the reformation, Luther and Calvin preached the pure doctrine; and both of them gave the greatest praises

* Their first name was Fratres Legis Christi, i. e. Brethren according to the Law of Christ.

† The history of the Bohemian persecution, from the time of their conversion by the Greek church, to the year 1632, was printed for John Walker in Pope's-Head-Alley, 1650.

The history of the Bohemian church is printed under the title of An exhortation of the churches of Bohemia to the church of England, with the history of the Sclavonian church, and the order and discipline used in the churches of the brethren of Bohemia, &c. printed for Thomas Parkhurst, in Cheapside, 1661.

to our Bohemian brethren, as the forerunners of the reformation. They were also received into England under King Edward the Sixth, and countenanced by his successors: He granted to John à Lasco, a Minister of these brethren, the church of Austin-Friars; and made him Superintendent of the German and other Protestant congregations, from more distant countries, as Bohemia, Moravia, Poland, and Hungary. And to speak a few words of their further intercourse with the church of England: Their Bishop Comenius himself presented the history of his church to King Charles the Second, in the year 1660, with a moving account of their sufferings, addressed to the church of England. He looked upon himself as the last Bishop; but Providence was pleased to direct better, and he lived to see the succession continued by the Polish branch.

In the year 1683, a most pathetic account of these brethren was published, by order of Archbishop Sancroft and Bishop Compton. They also addressed the church of England in the year 1715, being reduced to a very low ebb in Poland; and his late Majesty, Geo. I., by the recommendation of the late Archbishop Wake, gave orders in Council for the relief of these reformed episcopal churches, and Letters Patent for their support were issued soon after.

But since the year 1724 their circumstances have altered for the better, and they have wonderfully revived, increased, and spread in several countries; they have even made some settlements in America; in the province of Pensilvania, they have above eight-hundred people, to whom the Proprietor and Governor give a very good character.

In the year 1735, they were disquieted in Germany, and about twenty families went over with me to Georgia. They were industrious, patient under the difficulties of a new settlement, laborious beyond what could be expected; they gave much of their time to prayer, but that hindered not their industry: prayer was to them a diversion after labour. No time was lost in idle and vain amusements; nor did I find that they did less, but rather more than others. I mention this only, because a vulgar notion has prevailed, that they neglected labour for prayer. Many of ours consumed their time in drinking or vicious courses, and were thereby enfeebled, instead of being strengthened for their future labours. I do not say this of all, for numbers of our people acted well, and the effects of their extraordinary labours are still in being. The Moravian brethren were afterwards disturbed by popular commotions. When the people forced all persons to take arms, the Brethren made no contention, but most of them quietly withdrew, after they had paid what they owed to the Trustees. I speak of what I know. What other applications they made elsewhere I mention not; but I have heard from good authority that they would have continued enlarging the colony of Georgia, had they met with the tranquillity they seek. Since this, they have made many establishments in Germany, at a great expense : I am assured they have spent a great deal more than one hundred thousand pounds ; I hear from others of much larger sums. They therewith have settled numbers of industrious people. Much of this strength in men and money might have been acquired by us, had it not been for the uneasiness which the laws did not protect them from, and which makes it necessary for the Parliament to inquire into the matter, in order to remedy it.

These brethren propose a benefit to this country ; they have felt advantages arising from the influence of the proceedings of Parliament. Since the Parliament of England declared, in a public act, in their favour, a rest has arose to them in other countries. They therefore offer themselves, in gratitude for the said act, to settle many of their people in the British colonies, preferable to establishments where they are now invited by flattering appearances of present protection and the largest privileges. We are now to consider the manner wherein we are to treat this petition. Will you not accept of proposals beneficial to the nation ? In case you will not hear these proposals, you cannot receive the benefit, should they upon examination prove advantageous. The benefit of industrious people, who, without expense to the public, will settle in the colonies, must be obvious to every one ; even the Princes of Germany have been sensible of this advantage. One thing upon this head, which I would not speak of any where but in this H——, it not being a proper subject for public conversation. A great Prince, who loveth armies and knoweth how to use them, in order to engage these people to settle in his dominions, granted them these privileges which they here petition for, and much larger ones. The King of Poland ; the King of Denmark ; and other Princes have done the same, to encourage them to settle in their dominions : but as all these Governments are under the absolute will of the Prince, so, though the present may be the best of men, his will may change, or his successor be different in his opinion ; and as it is too much to risk the happiness of numbers upon the uncertain life, or more uncertain will of a mere man ; the Rulers, therefore, of these Brethren wisely seek, in a time when they possess a full quiet and peace in Germany, a place of safety, an Asylum, where, if distraction should arise, they may be safe under established written laws. They have enjoyed indeed, in one of our colonies, a temporary, though not a legal possession of the privileges they ask, but they are still under the same inconveniences through the uncertainty of such connivance in the British dominions. And it is not to be hoped or believed, that men will leave the climate they are accustomed to, in the neighbourhood of their native country, to labour under the same difficulties, the avoiding of which is the only motive of their removal. All they ask is a full Liberty of Conscience, under which they comprehend the scruples that great numbers of their people have, and which they desire to obviate, viz. the taking of an oath, and the bearing of arms; they pray that their affirmation may be accepted instead of an oath; and that they may be allowed to pay, in lieu of personal service. You may refuse to hear these proposals, but therewith you refuse the advantages that accrue from them. By hearing you will know, and then be able to regulate what you intend to do. Therefore I think there can be no objection to the sending this petition to a Committee to examine the whole, and then you will upon knowledge proceed to do what is fitting.

This proposal was seconded by that worthy Senator V—rs C—w—I, in these words:

Mr. President,

I join in all that my honoured friend has said, desiring that the petition of the Deputies of the Moravian churches, which to me appears extremely reasonable and beneficial to this nation, should be referred to the consideration of a Committee.

How reasonable soever this proposal appeared to the Majority, who could not but discern the national advantages, which must naturally follow to the state, from every acquisition of wealth and number of its inhabitants, M. Furius Publicola, without once entering into the merits, or attempting to invalidate any single fact stated by the Hon. Senator, who brought in the petition, replied with great warmth,

Mr. President,

The petition under consideration contains things of so new and extraordinary a nature, that I must beg leave to dissent from the proposal of having it committed. For I humbly conceive, the records of this Hon. H— cannot furnish us with a precedent, wherein private persons, especially such as are reputed Sovereigns in their own country, were ever permitted to dictate new laws or privileges in this assembly, without being first recommended from the Throne. Besides, Sir, I apprehend that the petitioners are a new sect, of a new religion, newly sprung up; though I am not prepared to give you the particulars. And though I would by no means be supposed an enemy to toleration, which is allowed by the laws of these realms, I must observe that this church, or congregational society, scorn to be tolerated. I am informed, Sir, that this sect increaseth prodigiously in numbers every where, especially in Germany, where the greatest part of the Protestants are run mad by their devices; and that their religion is founded upon political and worldly views. You can't, Sir, be unsensible with what care the Legislature has always guarded against the increase of Poperly in this nation: And I would propose the rejecting the Moravian brethren with as much caution; not that I would be thought to persecute a Papist for his religion, and a

Moravian for his opinion ; but because both these people, so far as I can discover, submit to the authority of a Pope, or Church, whom they acknowledge to be supreme in temporals ; by which means the coercive power of the civil Magistrate is destroyed, and the penal laws rendered ineffectual, while their obstinate sufferings will triumph over any thing that can be inflicted upon them. I therefore am persuaded, should this spirit obtain a sanction by law, and be permitted to make converts to their communion, as they have already done with great success amongst us, the consequences will be more dangerous than we can at present foresee. Let us then immediately agree to prevent their further growth in these dominions ; which I urge with greater vehemence, because, Sir, I can already discern the influence of their insinuations too much in this very H—— ; because I observe some Members espouse their cause, whom I have never thought guilty of religion. I am at a loss whether I shall stile the Petitioners, Jesuits, Papists, or Moravians : Nor do I desire to know any thing about them ; but I am certain, if we don't stop Enthusiasm in its first approaches, it will be too late to oppose its infatuations, when great numbers shall be seduced, united, and moved by different motives. Therefore I shall oppose this petition's going into a Committee. I am afraid, by the disposition I see in their favour, that it will return from the Committee with such force as to overpower the endeavours of the most serious-minded to stop its passing into a bill. And, Sir, should it be resolved to commit this petition, I will move that there shall be instructions given to the Committee to restrain the Moravian church from making Converts ; and to punish all those that should join with them in the same communion : Because it appears to me a grand absurdity from this H—— to encourage a doctrine destructive of all Government, whose support is a power to defend itself from foreign force and intestine wars ; whereas it appears by the tenor of this petition, that, should the Moravians ever convert a whole nation or province to their superstition, the said nation or province must of course yield to the enemy and be destroyed ; because they pray to be exempt from taking up arms in their own defence.

It was very much admired that this Gentleman could harangue so warmly against the motion, without taking the least notice of the many substantial reasons drawn from the Religion (which had been asserted to be truly Protestant) and from the industry of those people in support of their petition. And, when he was seated, the worthy Senator, Mr. H——, rose, and, addressing himself to the Chair, presently discovered the weakness of his objections and insinuations.

Sir,

The reasons advanced against committing this petition of the Moravian brethren, I hope, will be received by this Assembly as they deserve ;

yet, though they carry no force against the motion, I presume to say, that they seem to determine the necessity why their petition should be ordered into a Committee. Because, should these Petitioners be so dangerous to the state, into which they are received, it must be discovered by that means. But on the other hand, should they be found to be an inoffensive, sober, and industrious people, it will be a great loss to the colonies to have missed the opportunity of acquiring the addition of a number of sober and industrious subjects. And as to that insinuation, they scorn to be tolerated; I humbly presume it cannot be fairly laid to their charge. How can a people, who voluntarily petition for it, and earnestly request that liberty amongst us, be suspected to scorn toleration. Nor can I see how the doctrine of not bearing arms can be destructive to Government, so long as the petitioners are willing to contribute in money, and are ready to pay all legal impositions towards the raising and maintaining the Militia and Navy. I am also of opinion it would be departing from the justice and equity, from which we should never deviate, should we refuse to hear the proposals of a people, whom we have already received under our protection, by granting them the Affirmation instead of an Oath, in the case of Naturalization. And in fine, this application to us from a foreign Protestant church appears to me to be the effect of their gratitude; to be a token of their thankfulness for favours already received; and therefore ought to be accepted as an address of grateful minds, submitting themselves to the protection and government of our laws; and as such this petition should recommend the Moravian brethren more strongly to the consideration and favour of this Hon. H——.

Sir,

I am clearly of opinion that every opportunity and proposal for the better settling of our colonies ought to be embraced and considered.—It is a fundamental maxim in sound politicks, that the greatness, wealth, and strength of a country consist in the number of its inhabitants. And, agreeable to this maxim, all wise States and Republics, even when arrived at full growth and firm establishment, have, from time to time, invited and encouraged Foreigners to settle amongst them, and incorporate with the Natives, which in the end never fails to increase the riches of both. What raised the United Provinces to their grandeur and power? And what so greatly increased the revenues, and improved the estates of the natural-born subjects, as the encouragement given, by the late and present Kings of Prussia, to the subjects of other nations to settle there? But we have no need for foreign examples. These people were well known to our forefathers, whose wisdom and zeal protected, and provided for them. So that, Sir, what has been thrown out against this petition, for want of a right understanding about the petitioners, is so weakly supported that I am at a loss to conceive, how any Member of this Assembly, who ought to judge of every case proposed in it, without prejudice and partiality, and who has the welfare of his country at heart, can produce such objections, amongst which that request of an exemption from bearing arms is the most plausible; though if we consider the bloody wars of their forefathers, and the natural bent of human nature to run into extremes, it would be easy to account for this proposal: and on the other side let it be remembered that this request is neither new, nor found to be dangerous. What does that Gentleman think of the large body of Quakers so long ingrafted amongst us? Theirs is near a parallel case to that before us—They do not bear arms—yet I have never heard any complaint against them on that account. Have the colonies suffered by this pacific disposition? or, don't we, to their great credit, find their province of Pensilvania in a most, I was going to say in a more, flourishing condition than some others? And as I am convinced it is the interest of this nation to increase its strength and power, by increasing the number of its subjects, especially such as are sober and industrious, in America; and as it is notorious that our laws do not compel all English subjects to do personal service in time of war; so it is my opinion that it would be inconsistent with our principles of policy to reject the consideration of such promising and beneficial proposals; and that the petition ought to be committed; that the petitioners may be permitted to support their allegations; and then only be dismissed, if they can't answer such objections, as shall be raised, to the full satisfaction of this Hon. Assembly.

This argument was farther pursued by the Senator Pomponius Atticus, who observed, That the difficulties, which had been started against this petition's going into a Committee, could surely have no weight with those who take time to consider of persons and circumstances, before they condemn them. For my part, continued this Honourable Gentleman, I think it ought to be our first care to secure these people to our interest. Their numbers and wealth must increase our power and strength in our colonies; and when they have made improvements, and have their families and possessions to defend, it will be their own concern; they will never give up all to the sword of a tyrannical invader. Nature itself will prompt them to repel force by force, as the story goes of the Quaker, who, spying a Privateer sailing down upon him, hailed the enemy, and told him, that, though he intended him no harm, he was inclined to fire upon him, unless he would keep out of his way; which being not sufficient to oblige the Privateer to alter his course, and the mate trusting to the strength of the ship, and asking the Quaker, his master, leave to run the Privateer down, was at first answered with a pretty deal of confusion, that he would have nothing to do with it; but when the Quaker observed his man at the helm steer wrong, he cried out, Friend John, if thou art maliciously inclined, thou must steer larboard; and, by steering larboard under full sail, he ran the Privateer down, and sent her to the bottom of the sea.

L. Junius Brutus, concurring with the motion, delivered himself after this manner: Sir, The Hon. Gentleman, who has declared against committing the petition of the Moravian brethren, I am confident, had not considered the force of those arguments urged in their favour by the Hon. Gentleman, who spoke first; because, as he is a friend to religion, I should have expected from his candour, less warmth and opposition to the petition, and against the profession of a set of people, who, of all other Christians, conform the nearest to our happy Church-constitution. But I hope what has been and remains to be said will evince that these people do not attempt to bring in a new religion amongst us.—The tragic history of their famous Martyrs John Huss and Jerome of Prague is known to every body.—The intercourse of their brethren with our country, for almost four centuries, from the dawning of the Reformation, by the preaching of Wickliffe in England,—Their Episcopal constitution,—The correspondence of their Bishops with ours,—Their succession, their discipline, their morals, and, above all, their faith, should recommend and endear them to every true Englishman, who is sincerely attached to the established church of his country. It was a distinguished principle of piety and charity in the reign of King Edward VI. to assist the foreign Protestants, and to receive them with all possible tenderness and compassion, and to put them into the methods of life, when they in great numbers came over to seek liberty and safety, without nicely examining into the reasons of abandoning their native countries. And, what is worthy of your present attention, they were allowed to form themselves into distinct congregations, and to have their own Pastors, and the Rites of religion that were most familiar to them, till by degrees they should become capable of understanding our way of worship, and of their own accord fall into it. For they were so well inclined to Episcopal Government, that they seem all to have submitted to one chief Superintendent John à Lasco, a Polonian Nobleman; and to whose memory the petitioners pay the greatest regard, deriving their establishment, in this kingdom, from him; which, I hope, will satisfy the Gentlemen in the opposition that the Moravian Church is neither a new religion, newly sprung up, nor were they unknown to our forefathers.

It was hinted, they have multiplied greatly in numbers, in all countries where they spread.—A circumstance, so far from being treated to their disadvantage, that, I humbly presume, it should engage us to be more ready to admit their petition: this I am clear in, their numbers can never be too great for a country of the extent of the British colonies in America.

—Nor am I able to discern, how obedience to the authority of their church can be accounted a crime; if it is a fault in that Gentleman's opinion, I doubt not but the majority of this assembly wisheth, that all our people were guilty of the same.—As for the motion, for a provision to hinder these people from making converts, and to punish those who join in communion with them, I must declare my opinion, it is directly contrary to the laws of the land; we must either not receive them, or, if we admit them to partake of the privileges of British subjects, we must grant them all the liberty of conscience to which all other British subjects are intitled. And, therefore, I join in opinion with the honourable Senators that are for referring it to the consideration of a Committee.

On the 14th of March, 1748-9, L—G—O— read the report of the Committee, and delivered himself to the following effect.—It has been made appear, that the church, known by the stile of Unitas Fratrum, is an ancient, apostolical, and episcopal church; that it was originally planted by the Greek church, and has been acknowledged as such by the Synod of Constantinople, so lately as in the year 1740, whose commendatory letters to the Dignitaries of the Eastern churches, in favour of these brethren, are here before us; as are, also, the vouchers of their orthodoxy, signed and sealed by the Synod of Lyssa in Great Poland, on Feb. 10th, 1683, and presented to K. Charles II. whereby it is proved, that having resisted all the attacks of the Roman See for above seven hundred years, and obliged to withdraw from their native countries of Bohemia and Moravia, where the power of Popery prevailed greatly, they have preserved the purity of the Christian doctrine, and their apostolical rites and episcopal constitution in the greater Poland and Polish Prussia; for which, we find, the learned and truly pious Archbishop Cranmer and Bishop Latimer, martyrs for the Protestant faith, respected them much; besides the many testimonies we have of the same regard paid them by Luther, Calvin, Bucer, and other eminent reformers at home and abroad; and, afterwards, by the whole bodies of Lutherans and Calvinists, who united with these brethren in the Synod of Sendomir in Great Poland in 1570.—What has been said of their being known in England in the days of Wickliffe, and of their kind reception under K. Edward VI. is incontestable; and, it further appeareth, that our Sovereigns of later years, namely, K. Charles II. and his late Majesty, K. George I. the defenders of our faith, thought them worthy of their royal protection, by the letters patents which they granted for the support of this episcopal church, reduced to the utmost distress by the persecutions which the stedfastness of their faith had exposed them to in Poland, Bohemia and Moravia; and, since it may be presumed, that, next unto divine providence, these brethren do owe their very being and existence to that seasonable aid they have had from hence, shall we, can we, deny our petitioners, the church, that has, as it were, sprung out of their ashes, and, from the blood of their martyrs, the liberty to settle amongst us, to incorporate with us, and to improve our colonies with their labour and riches, as well as the purity of their doctrine and good morals, at the expense of those two small requests or privileges which they ask; at a time the same providence, which so wonderfully preserved them, has raised them to a flourishing state, and enabled them to make considerable settlements in Germany, to the amount of (I will not say for certain, but) a prodigious sum; and, to do the like in these dominions, out of a point of gratitude, and without any charge to the Government?

Nor do I conceive it can be amiss to observe, how much the Elector of Saxony and the K. of Prussia endeavour to gain these brethren to settle in their respective countries. Their predecessors have always, for two hundred years past, granted them an Asylum, and free liberty to exercise their religion; and, the reigning Princes of those countries, have lately renewed their friendship, and invited them into their dominions; and they have actually made several settlements in Silesia. But as the continual increase of their numbers, by fugitives from Bohemia and Moravia, or by converts from other parts, might probably alarm some of the German powers, by appearing too considerable a body, these brethren have, from time to time, at their own charge entirely, sent considerable numbers of their people into his Majesty's plantations in America; where, I, myself, amongst others, can testify, that they are an inoffensive, sober, quiet, and industrious people; and where they would have already made much larger settlements, had they at first been properly encouraged, and not laboured under some aspersions, through prejudice arising from the false information of their enemies.

And I am well informed, that this petition from an episcopal church to be exempt from bearing arms, and to be allowed their affirmation instead of an oath, does not proceed from the said brethren's holding it any wise unlawful to take an oath, or to bear arms, which they do not teach; but it ariseth from a desire to free those men of their communion from any compulsion in such like cases, who are scrupulous about these points.

This being seconded and confirmed in every point by several others, who spoke to the same effect, the b— was ordered to be prepared; and it was likewise ordered to print the report, and the most considerable of the vouchers relating to England, and extracts of the rest.

March 21st, 1748-9. Upon reading the b— the second time, the President informed the H—, that, upon a careful perusal, he had found the b— contain more than could be properly understood by the title, as it contained the same exemptions in Great Britain and Ireland, as the title seemed to confine within the British plantations in America. But he referred it to L—G—O—, for the reasons of this extent of the privileges petitioned for by the Unitas Fratrum.

L—G—O—, therefore, subsumed, and spoke to the following effect. —Unless the exemption of taking an oath be extended to all the British dominions, we do not allow the brethren a true and effectual encouragement to settle in our colonies; because any limitation in this point will oblige them to transport their people from Holland, which would be not only inconvenient for them, but prejudicial to the trade and navigation of this kingdom; as we must thereby lose the profits arising from their stores of provisions, and other necessaries on those occasions; or else it will lay them under this inconsistency, to be subject to those very difficulties here, from which we exempt them in the British dominions in America. Besides, I conceive that the same law which exempts them from taking an oath in the British colonies in America, does imply the same privilege throughout all the British dominions; because those colonies are subject to our laws, and appeals are frequently made from their courts to ours in England. But willing to obviate every dispute about such things, which might arise from the ambiguity of an act, and which would be very disagreeable to them, it has been thought most advisable to mention expressly in the b— what only appears implicitly in the title, so as to encourage them, without any restraint, to make such settlements, to found such seminaries, and to make such regulations in every port and place within these dominions as they shall think proper, for the reception of their German brethren, and for providing them with every thing necessary, as people do that are at full liberty on their own estate, and for enabling them to traffic, and to exercise their respective trades and callings, which in the end must conduce greatly to the interest of the whole nation. We cannot prescribe to them, who shall go to America, nor can we oblige them to transport all their German brethren to come here to join with them.—That must be left to their discretion.

These reasons appeared so satisfactory to the whole H—, that the b— passed without any alteration. However, it had like to have met with a different fate in the H— of L—, where it was taken into consideration on the 26th of April, 1749. When

C. Plinius Cæcilius* introduced the debate, with a declaration that he had no objection against the subject matter of the act before them; but that he would state some particulars, which he apprehended ought to be amended in the manner of wording it.—The title and preamble, said that noble L—, relate only to the encouragement of the Unitas Fratrum in America; but the enacting part extends the privileges of the affirmation to Great Britain and Ireland also. Whereas, I am of opinion, that, should the proceedings made in America, upon a simple affirmation, be made valid in our courts, when transmitted here, it would sufficiently answer the purposes of the b—, although the affirmation should be confined to the British-American colonies only. Again; the exemption from bearing arms is both without a precedent, and, I fear, may be productive of many bad consequences, if it be not particularly confined to the Moravian brethren; for, it may be construed to extend to hinder the pressing of men in time of war for the public service; and if so, what must be done in case our British subjects should join with them, and skreen themselves under the privileges of these brethren.—And, thirdly, I think the very manner of wording this b— is capable of misleading the people, who hope for the benefit of this act; for should they rely on the certificate as a sufficient evidence of itself, when produced, without any other evidence to prove that such certificate is duly executed, I apprehend no Judge would, from that clause, think himself obliged to take notice of it; except the execution of such certificate by the Bishop or Pastor should be proved by a witness upon oath, which may not easily be procured. It also might be difficult for them to prove, who is the nearest Bishop or Pastor in America; or, more difficult to prove, who is the nearest to Westminster-Hall. Indeed, the last clause, which requires the leaving the hand and seal of their Bishop or Pastor with the Board of Trade, seems, in some measure, to obviate this difficulty, and to oblige the Judge to take cognizance of the hand and seal of the Bishop; but, I must add, that this is a proceeding unknown to our laws; our Courts of Justice take no cognizance of the seals or certificates of our own Bishops, except in cases of marriages, or, where they have immediate jurisdiction; in which cases, their certificates are in the nature of records, and decrees of other courts, and, as such, they are admitted in evidence. In all other cases, where our Bishops have no jurisdiction, their acts must be proved in the same manner as the acts of all other men; and, if the law takes no cognizance of the seals of our own Bishops, much less does it of those of foreigners; as we may exemplify in many cases, during the times of Popery in this land; for even then, if a person was a Monk in a foreign monastery, he was never allowed to prove himself such by the certificate of the foreign Abbot, and was always obliged to be tried as a layman, because there was no possibility of proving himself to be a Monk, in the eye of the law.—Therefore, instead of a certificate, I refer it to your consideration, whether it would not be more advantageous for the parties concerned in this act to be examined in the nature of a voet dire, whether he be, or be not a member of such a church, before he should be permitted to be examined in chief; and to be liable to the same penalty as one that is perjured, in case he should falsely affirm himself to be a member of that church, when, in fact, he is not.

*M. T. Cicero** replied: I presume that the b— before us has been well considered, drawn with the greatest care, and communicated to the brethren by their Deputies, who cannot answer what effect any alterations may have upon the minds of their constituents, whose gratitude for the act already passed in their favour, and the great idea they conceive of British liberty, dispose them to become British subjects; and, whether this is not an object worth the granting of those privileges, I submit to the wisdom of this H——.

As to the objection against the affirmation extending to Great Britain and Ireland; it ought to be considered, that all law-suits commenced in America, for some certain sums, may be appealed or brought to England, after they are come to a decree or end judgment; so that the sentence justly given in America, upon their affirmation, must be void here, if their said affirmation cannot be given in evidence in England.—Besides, such an exception would greatly embarrass those who should be appointed to defend the just rights of their brethren in England, by commission from America; and put them in a much worse condition than either Jews or Papists under our laws, for they are permitted to swear, the one on the Old Testament, the other on the Gospels, in all civil matters; and, as the laws of all nations allow the evidence of every people, when averred upon their own country gods, and given according to the rites of their respective nations, Shall it be said that Great Britain, a country under Christian government, did ever refuse to admit the solemn affirmation of Christians and Protestants, and given in the presence of Almighty God in England, though the Legislature accepts of it in America? which, in my humble opinion, is a tacit insinuation, that God is more present in our colonies than amongst ourselves.

Nor am I for abridging this privilege, so as to confine it to Germans only; because such a limitation would presently deprive the brethren of those privileges they so earnestly request.—We are not enquiring into their articles of faith; but, I dare say, that, whether his faith be well grounded or not, no man will settle himself in a country for conscience sake, where his son, by being born there, shall lose the privilege granted to his father; or, where the man himself, after seven years continuance therein, shall be deprived of those advantages by becoming an Englishman, which he had a right to before he was such.—Again, to consider this argument, in regard to those who may join themselves to these brethren; any one who is a Christian must know, that, as such, he cannot refuse to admit into his communion those who desire to be Christians. But the discipline of the Moravian church is so well instituted for preventing irregularities, that it cannot be supposed calculated to gain many converts; except it should be granted that the world, in this age, is suddenly inclined to renounce the joys and pleasures of this life; and, by this limitation, we shall not lay so great a restraint on them, as upon those few, who may chuse to embrace their doctrines and way of life: and, Shall an Englishman be deprived of the liberty of publicly avowing the sentiments of his soul?—Besides, I cannot apprehend how it is possible to word such a limitation; if it be expressed by confining the privileges to the German-born brethren, you exclude every Bohemian, Pole, &c., as also all the French, Italians, and other foreign Protestants in their communion, and who will naturally remove into such places where they can enjoy the most safety and liberty. If we except, in general, the subjects of Great Britain, all foreigners fall under that denomination, during their abode in these dominions; and, if we should limit the exception to the native-born subjects of Great Britain, we exclude their children born amongst us; if we forbid the English, Scotch, and Irish to join with them, we shall prohibit the conversion of the English, Scotch, and Irish Papists by their ministry; and, in a word, we shall strike at the act of toleration, which gives liberty to all of chusing their opinion.

I also am for retaining the clause about the certificates, for I think, as it stands, it is a very proper regulation; and, indeed, a restriction imposed upon the brethren, by those who wished to bind them down, in such a manner, as to be always able to know the certain state of their church, by obliging them to register their Bishops and Pastors at the Board of Trade; so that to take away, or to alter this clause, is, in effect, to lessen the authority of the Government: and, I shall only add, this clause also, as it stands, will effectually prevent any from pretending to their privileges, who are not really of the brethren; for the Bishops and Pastors become answerable not to grant certificates to any, who are not of their church.

M. Agrippa then gave it as his opinion, also, that he could not apprehend any inconveniency to the State, to privilege an industrious, opulent, and conscientious people, who scruple to take an oath, to give their affirmation instead thereof, throughout all his Majesty's British dominions.—No inconveniency has risen from the same privilege granted to the Quakers; and, I remember, that, in the debate on the act for making their affirmation perpetual, it was my opinion, that this privilege ought to be granted them for our own benefit, as well as for satisfying their consciences, because cases might happen in which their evidence would be necessary. How far I was right in my argument, a case that happened after, plainly justified.—The late Duke of Newcastle's will was witnessed by Dr. Heathcoat, who was a Quaker; and as he scrupled to take an oath, the said will could not have been proved, and, consequently, the present Duke of Newcastle must have lost his estate, if the Doctor's affirmation could not have been received in evidence thereof.—It is true, our Prelates strenuously opposed the said act; but, being convinced that no inconvenience has risen from it, and that the making of the Quakers affirmation perpetual has proven a public benefit, I find that they are all united in favor of the b— before us.

Nor do I apprehend the least hazard to the State from the other part of the b—, which is to exempt the brethren from bearing arms. It may be, that there may be many amongst those peaceable people, who do not chuse to fight, yet, I am confident, self-preservation is so ingrafted into the constitution of every mortal, that it will teach them to defend their lives and properties, or, to procure others to do it for them, if they are not willing to do it themselves; and I can give you an instance of this very nature in a man, who afterwards made himself very well known to the public; this was the late Sir Charles Wager, who in his youthful days, being mate of a ship, commanded by a Quaker, was attacked homeward bound from America, by a French Privateer. At first the Quaker called, and told the Frenchman, that he had no inclination to fight, and that he would do him no damage, provided he would alter his course; but finding the enemy bore down more and more upon him, and that his property was in danger, he added, Friend, I perceive that thou art not well inclined, and I advise thee to take care of what thou art about; for though I will not fight thee myself, perhaps my man Charles will; accordingly, Charles was ordered to fight the ship, and took the Privateer, which was the foundation of his fortune.—It may also be observed, that the principle of not fighting does not make many converts, and soon wears out. In the last century, there was a sort of Anabaptists in the Canton of Berne, who took up this doctrine of not bearing arms; a doctrine directly contrary to the policy of that republic, whose dependence is very much upon war; and, having obtained leave to withdraw themselves, many of them settled in America, became a very useful people, and, I am informed, have now entirely lost their scruples about bearing of arms.—I wish our Moravian brethren may succeed in making many converts in America; but, I am pretty sure, that such of them as scruple to defend themselves, will find no proselytes to a doctrine so repugnant to nature.

I would not be interpreted in any wise to speak against the Quakers; but, I can say more good of the brethren, whose excellent scheme is not so narrow, nor so stiff, as that of other Protestants. I may compare it to a casting-net over all Christendom, to take in all denominations of Christians: if you like Episcopacy, they have it; if you chuse the Pesbytery of Luther, or of Calvin, they have that also; if you delight in Quakerism, there is a people amongst them that have something of that, and of every denomination of Christians, except Popery.—And, I am persuaded, that had our Reformers in England had only half the sense, and followed this plan of the brethren, instead of quarrelling amongst themselves, their endeavours would have produced much better effects.

As for the antiquity of this episcopal church, I do not rightly know how old it is; but we have a clear account of its existence for above one hundred years before our reformation; that they strove zealously against Popery, and that their martyrs, John Huss and Jerom of Prague, did suffer for the same, and (to the eternal shame of the Emperor Sigismund, who broke his safe-conduct) were burnt at Constance in the years 1415 and 1416; nor am I certain whether those two martyrs would have scrupled taking up arms in their own defence.

But what I know, and what is most material for us to consider, is, we greatly want to settle our colonies; and every-man, who is possessed of any art, or has any substance to carry thither, is a subject to be encouraged: and shall we then demur, and raise difficulties against the admission of an ancient Protestant, episcopal church; a numerous, quiet, industrious, good, and wealthy people, who desire only two little privileges for such of them, who have tender consciences? I could wish they would all come over, and settle here, or in our American plantations.

As for those clauses intended to ascertain such people as claim the privileges of this church, I am of opinion, that as the Quakers are not obliged, when their affirmation is tendered to them, to bring any proof of their being Quakers, but are admitted as such upon their own affirmation, and no inconvenience has proceeded from it; so the Moravian brethren need not bring any certificate, but should also be admitted, as such, upon their own affirmation. Nor could there remain any difficulty in the b—, should these clauses be entirely dropped.

These reasons and illustrations of facts seemed to remove all objections to the affirmation, and exemption of bearing arms; but, L—H—x replied, that he could not come into that motion of dropping those clauses, by which the members of the brethren were intended to be ascertained; because he apprehended, that those clauses would be necessary both for the brethren themselves, who being a formed society, could not allow any man should be at liberty to declare himself to belong to them, whom they had no reason to acknowledge for a member of their church; and for the Government, since without such a method it could not be certainly known who might have a just title to those privileges, which may be granted by the act; and, therefore, he added, though I am not as yet prepared to shew how the difficulties, which have been stated by one of the noble L—s, may be properly removed; yet, it is my opinion, that these clauses ought to remain a part of the b—; and I hope an expedient will be found to satisfy all parties.

L—S— pursued this argument; and gave it as his opinion, that the first clause asserted no foreign jurisdiction at all, but was intended only to prove, that the person, who claims the privileges of the act is a real member of such a society or church; and a certificate of this kind is no more than an affidavit, common in England, in parallel cases, which hath no connection with those certificates mentioned by a certain noble L—, as never to have obtained credit in the present, or even in the Romish times; because they always suppose properties, or men's lives, or other reasons foreign to the question in debate; and, therefore, joined with the

T. Maximus Caledonius* corroborated all that had been advanced in favour of the b—. I think the requests of the petitioners are extremely reasonable; and, that the acquiring of such a good and conscientious people is an unquestionable benefit, not to the colonies only, but to these nations in general: besides, I am of opinion, we grant them very little, if anything at all. I must pay a great regard to the antiquity and excellency of this church; and to its discipline, universality, and charity, which receives Protestants of every denomination into its communion. As to the particular privilege of the affirmation, let me remark, That the affirmation, recited in the act, is a more solemn oath, than any form of an oath used in England. I should even prefer it to the form of the oath in my own country; for the strictest definition of an oath, I apprehend, is an affirmation made in the presence of Almighty God, and calling on him to be a witness to the truth of what is then solemnly declared.—Again, as to the exemption from bearing arms, as long as they are willing to pay in lieu thereof, I am for dispensing with them in this point also; which, I suppose, ariseth from a scrupulosity, which once actuated the Anabaptists of Switzerland, about 50 years ago; and may probably subside in process of time, as a certain noble L—d has observed, it has already done with them in America. And, thirdly, the clauses about certificates appear to me to be a wise regulation, not to be mended by the alterations proposed. Nor can I imagine any Judge will admit of such a certificate, before he, in course, has asked the person, who claims the privileges contained therein, whether he be a real member of the Moravian church? Whether he will declare it in the presence of Almighty God? And, whether he can take his affirmation about the truth of the matter contained in the said certificate? What then should hinder this clause from standing as a part of this b—?

Q. Fabius Maximus† confirmed the same opinion, and further added, That it appeared to be an easy matter for the people, who scrupled the taking an oath, to give their affirmation to the truth of the certificate; and that, in case the certificate comes from America to England, it can easily be attested, by the Board of Trade, in whose office the handwriting and seal of such Bishops and Pastors, as are authorized to grant certificates, are left; or by the Pastors of the brethren, who are settled in London, Yorkshire, &c.

But Cn. Domitius Calvinus, not being satisfied, declared in a few words, That the matter in debate was of the highest consequence; that therefore it ought to be well considered; and that he was of opinion, some check ought to be put upon a people, who scruple to take up arms in the defence of a country that receives them, and is to venture the lives of its natural born subjects for their protection.

However, my L—d S—s insisted, that there could no such inconvenience arise from the certificates, as some had insinuated; for, as he added, it is customary in some parish cases, and on other occasions, for persons that are neither the Minister, nor the Churchwarden, to give certificates or affidavits in their names; as also in cases where persons are empowered to receive money; and, therefore, why should these certificates meet with so much opposition, especially as the clauses are not made better by any of the amendments proposed? And as for the difficulty of knowing which Pastor is nearest to Westminster-Hall; I know said he, the brethren have Pastors in Yorkshire, and in London, which removes that objection.

L—d B—, having confirmed all that had been urged in favour of the clauses as they stood, added that it was his opinion the said clauses had been well considered beforehand; and that the difficulties, now started against them, did not appear to him of any great weight.

Upon which Cn. Domitius Calvinus assured their L—d—ps, That he had no intention to oppose the b—, which promised so advantageous an addition to the British colonies, and to this nation; neither was he desirous to drop the clauses in debate: But, said he, I am still of opinion, That some amendment ought to be made; for whoever claims the privileges contained in the act, by producing such a certificate, as the first clause requires, should also himself be bound to take his affirmation, that the certificate had been duly executed; or produce sufficient evidence of the truth of the matter contained therein: which is so reasonable, that I am persuaded the Deputies of the brethren will make no manner of difficulty to agree to it.

But this did not prevent the L— B— of W—r—st—r's* delivering his opinion concerning these people, and their case.—I own myself, said he, a friend to the b—, and to the people who petition for it.—Our Moravian brethren are an ancient episcopal church, which preserved itself from the errors of *Poper*y in the most hazardous times, as might be proved, was it necessary, in this noble Assembly, to relate the many and great sufferings it has undergone, on that account, for the four last centuries. Of all Protestants, they come the nearest to the established church of this kingdom, in their doctrine and constitution. And, tho' the enemy has persecuted them from several quarters, the soundness of their faith, and the purity of their morals, have defended them from any imputation of *Poper*y and Immorality; neither of which has ever been laid to their charge by their most inveterate persecutors. And as they are proved to be a quiet, industrious, and wealthy people, I humbly presume, their settling in a Country, where good morals are so much wanting, will be a great advantage to us, and engage every one, that wishes well to his own Country, to look upon this act to be a wise and beneficial regulation. I am in no ways apprehensive, that the granting the two privileges requested by the brethren, for their scrupulous members, can be attended with any inconveniency to this nation. And as those two points don't make a part of the doctrine of their church I dare say, they will, in time, drop more easily, and be quite forgot. Besides, I can't help thinking, that the other members of the church, who do not scruple to defend themselves, and yet have so much love for their weak brethren, as to pray a forbearance with them in these two points, will also take care to defend them in time of necessity.—The two clauses so much debated, as they were not inserted to oblige the brethren, but at the request of the Board of Trade, as I am credibly informed, have been acquiesced to by the brethren, to gratify the Government, who, by this means, will be able, at all times, to ascertain the numbers and power of this people; and to prevent any scandalous persons assuming their name, and laying claim to their privileges, when they have no right thereto. Therefore, if the certificate, and the enrolling the Bishops and Pastors of the Moravian brethren at the Board of Trade, is an hardship, it falls upon the petitioners; and, if they have nothing to object, we may safely agree to it. Nor can I help expressing my concern, should this b— suffer, or even be delayed, for the sake of so wise a regulation; especially after it has been read twice without any opposition, and the fees have been paid. I therefore hope the clauses may be admitted to stand as they do, without any alteration; which otherwise might keep the brethren in suspense; or be a means to hinder them from making use of the first season to send over a part of their people to our colonies in America.

C. Plinius Cæcilius, not content with what had been said in favour of the bill, as then worded, urged, That a clause should be inserted to punish any who should answer falsely and corruptly to a Judge or Magistrate concerning the certificate, as in the case of perjury; which punishment, his L——p insisted, ought to be mentioned expressly in the law, or there could be no security.

Then Cn. Domitius Calvinus moved, that the Committee might be adjourned; and said, he did not doubt but that all parties, in the next Committee, would agree to such alterations, as should be found proper for the security of the State, and to the satisfaction of the Deputies of the Moravian church.

The next Committee on the 1st of May, 1749, was opened, by reading the clause of exemption from bearing of arms; after which my L——d H——x spoke to the following effect:—I don't presume to correct or amend what was so well and judiciously stated in the last Committee; but as the post, which I have the honour to hold, calls upon me to consider the subject in debate with more extraordinary attention, I think it my duty to deliver my thoughts about it with the greatest freedom. But, before I enter upon the enacting part, it is my opinion, That before any one raiseth objections against a b—, or desires to consider them, when made, he ought first of all to weigh well the general tendency or aim thereof, whether it be to the utility and welfare of the common weal; for, if it don't answer that good end, the most minute objections are of weight, and deserve a serious discussion: But if it be, we ought to pay no greater regard to the most important objections, than to make them serve to put the matter in debate under some better regulation, without endeavouring by any means to overthrow it.

Now it is allowed, that the general aim of the act before us being to admit an industrious, quiet, and wealthy people to settle in our plantations in America, under certain privileges or exemptions; both policy and Christian charity speak in behalf of this aim: forasmuch as the strength and support of our fleets, in a great measure, depends upon the well peopling of our colonies; which makes every proposal for that end of the utmost importance to this nation, which ought to be always upon its guard against a neighbouring Kingdom, jealous of our prosperity, snatching at all opportunities to aggrandize itself: and, tho' the want of Toleration in religion, is a great disadvantage to them, endeavouring by all other ways and means to promote and encourage its colonies, with the same view to strengthen their power by sea: Shall we then in policy let slip any advantage in an affair of so great importance, and in which our Christian liberty of conscience gives us the preference? As to Christian charity, it calls upon us to support, to the best of our power, a church so respectable for its antiquity; so pure in its doctrine; so truly apostolic in its constitution, and, what is of more weight with me, so remarkable for the good morals of its members; which, my L—ds! I'm thoroughly convinced is the best proof and test of the inward purity of the heart. Therefore I am for removing all obstacles, and for thankfully receiving such a people under our protection, who have suffered so long, and so much, from the common enemy of ALL Protestants. Yet,

I must confess, I have had some real objections against that clause in the enacting part, which is to EXEMPT the brethren from bearing arms; objections which seem to be of no small importance.—For it is reasonable to suppose that many good people in America will readily join with a church so much esteemed for its decency, purity, and morality; and if those converts also should scruple to bear arms, in case of need; where shall one find a sufficient force to defend our colonies, in case of an invasion, when the numerous body of the Moravian brethren are absolutely exempted by this act?—In order to prevent this inconvenience, I had inserted an amendment, at the beginning of the clause of exemption from military service, thinking it would be better to express it in this manner : 'That every person, who is a member of the said church, and who shall transplant himself, and reside in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, HIS and HER POSTERITY FOR EVER.' But I have discovered greater difficulties in my amendment than those I endeavoured to obviate. And having also reflected that there is no word in this act, relating to soldiers and mariners, but only to those who are summoned; and that summoning is not our way of inlisting soldiers, every one being left to his own free choice whether he will serve the King in a military capacity, or not; except in those emergent cases, when his Majesty is impowered to press men into his service; and as in these cases, I apprehend, the exemption of the brethren will be no sufficient plea, I dropt my own amendment; and turned my thoughts upon the supposed detriment such an exemption from personal service in the militia might be to the colonies, whose chief strength depends upon a proper regulation of this service, and from which no doubt the brethren will have a right to claim an exemption by this act. But, tho' this objection carried the greatest weight with me, I, upon mature consideration, am convinced, That, as they oblige themselves to pay an equivalent in money, such an exemption can't properly affect the militia.

Nor am I for limiting or restraining these privileges to the present brethren, and their sole posterity, who transplant themselves to America from other parts; and denying them to those who may unite with them in the British dominions: Because, first, such a proviso would render the end and purpose of the act entirely void and of none effect. Secondly, the difficulties that would follow a limitation of the privileges to the posterity of the brethren, and the ascertaining those who ought to be intitled to it, are insurmountable, beside the absurdity of confining the privileges to persons, instead of opinions; and because, thirdly, This would be striking at the root of toleration, of whose blessed effects we are very sensible; and, consequently, it would alarm the Presbyterians, Quakers, and all the various persuasions of Dissenters, to see such an inroad made into the liberty of conscience, who might justly apprehend that the next stroke would be a total subversion of the toleration act. —Having thus declared myself a friend to the b—, I heartily desire, that the clause which discharges the brethren from being summoned to bear arms, or do military service, may stand and remain as it is, without any restraint; it being always in the power of the Legislature to remedy any inconveniency, if any such should arise from such indulgence.

Then, this Clause being agreed to, the Committee proceeded to the next, concerning the certificates, and the L— B— of W—r—ster informed their L—ps, That notwithstanding this clause had been the subject of much debate in the former Committee, he hoped that the amendments, which he had to offer, and to which the Deputies of our brethren of the Unitas Fratrum, and their united brethren, had heartily agreed, would remove all difficulties; which amendments his L—p begged leave to read, as proper to be inserted in the second part of the clause after these words: ‘Shall produce a certificate (add)’ ‘Signed by some ‘Bishop or Pastor of the said church, &c.’

This, continued that pious and wise Prelate, is the substance of the amendments proposed in the last Committee: Nor do I in the least doubt of the concurrence of those in the opposition, who I am confident desired nothing further, than to put the whole affair upon a better footing. So that the Deputies of our brethren, who are witnesses to our disinterested proceedings, can inform their brethren abroad, That this delay was not owing to any unwillingness in us to grant them settlements in his Majesty’s colonies; but that it happened wholly and solely through a desire to put their privileges upon a more sure, and effectual footing for themselves.—For my own part, they have my good wishes; and I heartily desire, that such encouragement may be given them, as may not only induce these our brethren of the Moravian church, but also our brethren of other Protestant churches to settle in the British colonies.

The b— passed with these amendments, Nemine Con. and received the Royal assent, which was given by commission on the 26th of May, 1749.

ANNO VICESIMO SECUNDO

GEORGII II. REGIS.

An Act for encouraging the People known by the Name of Unitas Fratrum or United Brethren, to settle in his Majesty's Colonies in America.

WHEREAS many of the People of the Church or Congregations called the Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren, are settled in His Majesty's Colonies in America, and demean themselves there as a sober, quiet, and industrious People; and many others of the same Persuasion are desirous to transport themselves to, and make larger Settlements in the said Colonies at their own Expence, provided they may be indulged with a full Liberty of Conscience, and in the Exercise of the Religion they profess; and several of the said Brethren do conscientiously scruple the taking of an Oath, and likewise do conscientiously scruple bearing Arms, or personally serving in any military Capacity, although they are willing and ready to contribute whatever Sums of Money shall be thought a reasonable Compensation for such Service, and which shall be necessary for the Defence and Support of His Majesty's Person and Government: And whereas the said Congregations are an antient Protestant Episcopal Church, which has been countenanced and relieved by the Kings of England, Your Majesty's Predecessors: And whereas the Encouraging the said People to settle in America will be beneficial to the said Colonies; therefore may it please Your Majesty, at the humble Petition of Abraham Baron of Gersdorff, Lewis Baron of Schrautenbach free Lord of Lindheim, David Nitschmann Syndic, Charles Sehachmann Baron of Hermsdorff, and Henry Cossart Agent, Deputies from the said Moravian Churches, in Behalf of themselves and their United Brethren, that it may be enacted; and be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That from and after the Twenty fourth Day of June, One thousand seven hundred and forty nine, every Person being a Member of the said Protestant Episcopal Church, known by the Name of Unitas Fratrum, or the United Brethren, and which Church was formerly settled in Moravia and Bohemia, and are now in Prussia, Poland, Silesia, Lusatia, Germany, the United Provinces, and also in His Majesty's Dominions, who shall be required upon any lawful Occasion to take an Oath in any Case where by Law an Oath is or shall be required, shall, instead of the usual Form, be permitted to make his or her solemn Affirmation or Declaration in these Words following:

I A. B. do declare in the Presence of Almighty God, the Witness of the Truth of what I say.

Which said solemn Affirmation or Declaration shall be adjudged and taken, and is hereby enacted and declared to be of the same Force and Effect, to all Intents and Purposes, in all Courts of Justice, and other Places where by Law an Oath is or shall be required within the Kingdoms of Great Britian and Ireland, and also in all and every of His Majesty's Colonies and Dominions in America, as if such Person had taken an Oath in the usual form.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That any Person making such solemn Affirmation or Declaration, who shall be lawfully convicted, wilfully, falsely, and corruptly to have affirmed or declared any Matter or Thing, which, if the same had been deposed on Oath in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt Perjury, every such Person so offending shall incur the same Pains and Penalties, as by the Law and Statutes of this Realm are enacted against Persons convicted of wilful and corrupt Perjury.

Provided, and be it enacted, that no Person being of the said Church or Congregation called the Moravian or United Brethren, shall by virtue of this Act be qualified to give Evidence in any Criminal Causes, or to serve on Juries; any thing contained in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

And be it further enacted, That every Person who is a Member of the said Church or Congregation, who shall reside in any of His Majesty's Colonies in America, who shall at any Time after the said Twenty fourth Day of June, One thousand seven hundred and forty nine, be summoned to bear Arms, or do military Service, in any of His Majesty's said Colonies or Provinces of America, shall on his Application to the Governor or Commander in Chief of the said Colony or Province, or to such Officer or Person, by whom such Person shall have been summoned or required to serve, or be mustered, be discharged from such Personal Service; provided that such Person, so desiring to be discharged from such Personal Service, contribute and pay such Sum of Money as shall be rated and assessed on him in lieu of such Personal Service, so as such Sum shall be rated, assessed, and levied, and be in such Proportion, as is usually rated, assessed, levied, and paid, by other Persons residing in the same Colony or Province, who are by reason of Age, Sex, or other Infirmity unable to do Personal Service, and who are possessed of Estates of the same Nature as the Persons desiring such Discharge.

And to prevent any Doubt which may arise, whether any Person, pretending or claiming to be a Member of such Church or Congregation, is actually a Member thereof, be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all and every Person and Persons whatsoever, who shall, as a Member or Members of such Church or Congregation, claim the Benefit of this Act, or of any Matter or Thing herein contained, shall, at the Time when he or they make such Claim, produce a Certificate signed by some Bishop of the said Church, or by the Pastor of such Church or Congregation who shall be nearest to the Place where such Claim is made: and shall be examined concerning the Matters contained in the said Certificate, and the due Execution thereof; and such Person so affirming to the best of his Knowledge and Belief in Manner herein before-mentioned, or proving by the Testimony of other legal Witnesses, that the said Certificate was duly executed by such Bishop or Pastor; and also affirming, that he is actually a Member of the said Church, known by the Name of Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren, shall be adjudged, deemed, and taken to be actually a Member of the said Church or Congregation, and as such shall be entitled to the Benefit of this Act.

And be it further enacted, That any Person who shall be lawfully convicted of having wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirmed or declared in Manner aforesaid, that such Certificate was duly executed, or that he is a Member of such Church, when, in Fact, such Affirmation is untrue, such Person so falsely affirming, and being duly convicted thereof, shall incur the same Pains and Penalties, as by the Law and Statutes of this Realm are enacted against Persons convicted of wilful and corrupt Perjury.

And that it may be known whether such Bishops and Pastors, so signing such Certificates, be of the Church known by the Name of Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren, within the Meaning of this Act, be it enacted, That the Advocate of the said Church or Congregation of the United Brethren for the time being, shall lay, or cause to be laid before The Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, in order that the same may remain in their Office, a List or Lists of all the Bishops of the said Church of the United Brethren, who are appointed by them to grant Certificates as aforesaid, together with their Hand-writing, and usual Seal: and that, from time to time, the said Advocate shall send to the said Commissioners for Trade and Plantations the Names, Hand-writing, and

Seals of any Bishops, that shall be hereafter consecrated and appointed by them as aforesaid, and the Names of such Pastors as shall be authorized by the said Advocate or Bishops to give Certificates in any of His Majesty's Colonies in America.

And be it enacted and declared by the Authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be a Publick Act; and shall be judicially taken Notice of as such by all Judges, Justices, and other Persons whatsoever, without specially pleading the same.
